"The Luncheon" is a short-story written by W. Somerset Maugham who is a Eminent British playwright, novel, and short-story. & He is also known as 'master of concise novel'. He is in the very top rank of 'second rate'. His writings were simple to understand.

A lady wrote a letter to the narrator about his writings which she read. After receiving that letter narrator wrote thanksgiving letter to her. Presently he received another letter from the same lady requesting a meal in a Foyot's. Foyot's is a very rich restaurant he never even thought of going there. But he ~~was~~ can't say no to a woman. So, he ~~ag~~ decided to go there. He had eighty pounds to lead his entire month. He estimated that midday luncheon in Foyot's does not exceeds fifteen pounds. He ~~can~~ thought that he can manage it by leaving coffee for next two weeks.

In Paris on Thursday at half-past-twelve they met at Foyot's where the French savours eat. He thought that the lady is young but when he met her he came to know that she is of forty. She was very talkative. Initially she told that she never eat anything to the Luncheon. But he forced her to eat something.

firstly she ordered the Salmon Fish which coastly. Then she told that she never eat more than one thing to the Luncheon. when waiter asked anything do you want until it cooks, she immediately ordered Caviar. she did hesitated to order. Narrator after seeing this he ordered cheapest dish for him on the menu that is mutton chop. she told that he is unwise to eat meat. she suggested to not to ~~have~~ overload the stomach. Then after finishing these two she ordered white wine and narrator choose water as drink.

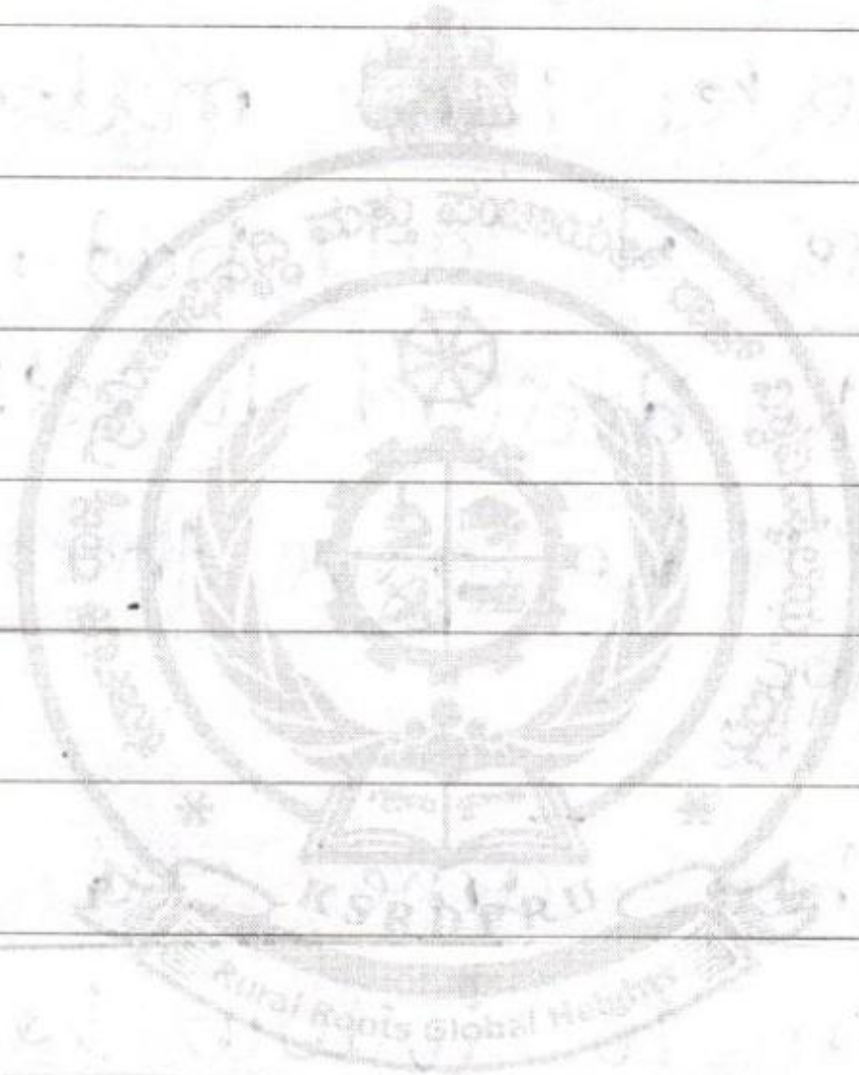

when waiter came again she order asparagus. when she ordered it the authors heart sank little because he knew that it coastly. But, he is helpless. when it came their table the aroma of that asparagus attracted him but he can't eat as he said that he never eat it when she ~~see~~ asked him. After having that than he ask for coffee she told coffee ~~with~~ some ice-cream. He ordered those for her and lastly she took a bucket full of peaches. When the narrator tries to eat it she told that he is already had too much meal.

At the last bill came to seventy seven francs. He got tensioned that what should he do if the bill came more than eighty francs. ~~When~~ He was mentally prepared that if bill came more than eighty francs, he will put hands in his pocket and make a drama that he lost his purse. If lady had money she will pay otherwise he decided to left his watch there. After paying bill he gave three francs to the waiter as a tip.

They came out the restaurant she advised him to follow her example to have simple luncheon and not to eat more than one thing. The narrator replied that yes, yes & never eat anything for dinner today as he was left with not a franc also, she jumped into the cab. She never thing about the narrator and his financial condition she go on ordering costly dishes and never asked about the bill that shall I pay? After this he had a few months before him when he meets her after twenty years at a play. He saw that that lady is now a twenty-one stone weight i.e., one thirty four kilograms.

He thinks that time had taken its revenge.

14 "Night of Scorpion" poem is written by Nissim Ezekiel. who was born in London. He became very famous for his writings at a very young age. He wanted to become a surgeon but he became poet when his first novel released he decided to continue in the stream of poems. He ended his life at very young age of twenty-six.

The poet start narrating the poem by remembering ~~the~~ his childhood memory. One day, at night a continuous rainfall drawn a scorpion into poet's home. It was hidden beneath the sack of rice in a dark room. When poet's mother entered the dark room the scorpion poisoned.

The news spread all over the village the villagers slowly started gathering in poet's house as "swarm of flies" poet used this simile to indicate the number of peoples gathering there and were murmuring among themselves. They prayed the God to stop the ~~movement~~ movement of the scorpion because they believed that every movement of scorpion would be threatening to her life. Villagers started searching for scorpion.

with candles and lanterns. But they could not find that.

As time passes the mother became very weak due to the movement of the poison within the body. The villagers started gathering with more and more candles and lanterns. They thought that she came near to her end of her life. They all believed in superstitions. They told that scorpion spurted poison into her because she may be did some sins in her previous birth. So, the poison will purify her flesh and make her free from sin. They called this world as unreal as everything in this world is temporary only birth and death cycles are permanent.

Everyone are busy in these talks but the small boy (narrator) could not understand properly anything. The people when they came to narrator's home with candles, the shadows they form on the wall appeared as scorpion to the narrator. That made him terrified. But the rain did not stop. They keep on buzzing the lady's name hundred times.

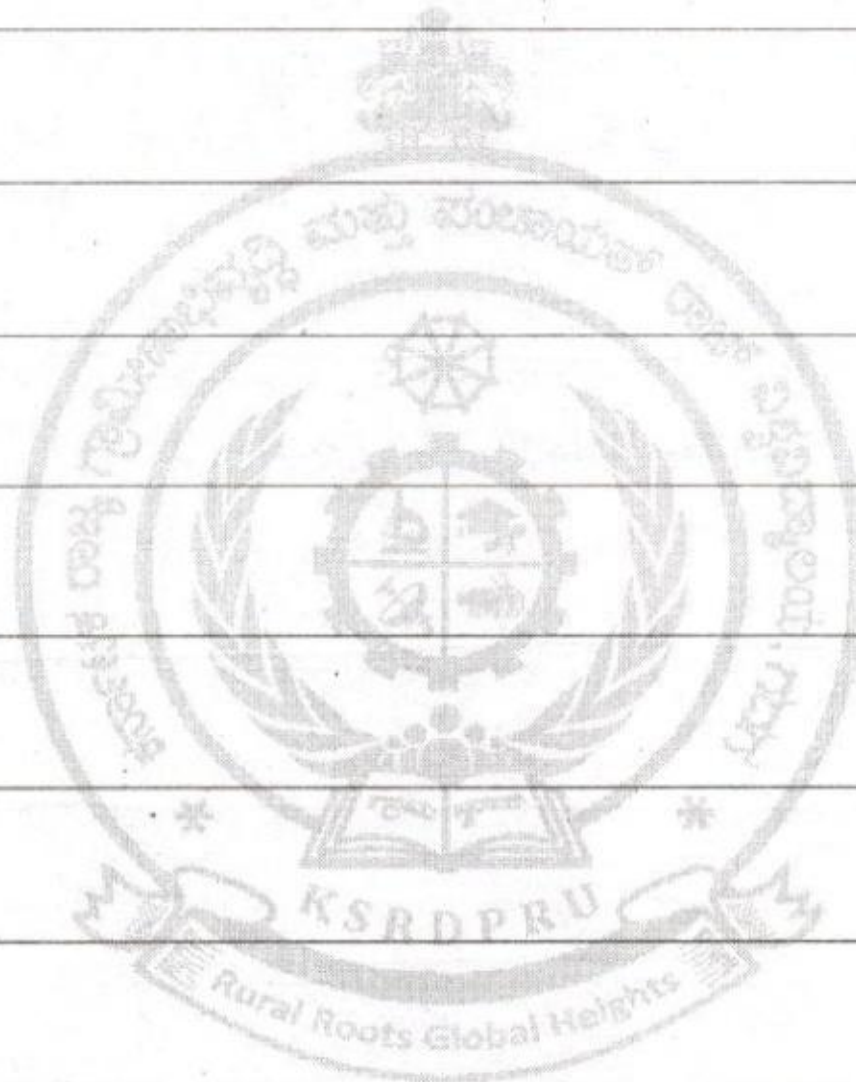

On another side narrator's father, who is rationalistic, he never believed in superstitions. He wanted to save his wife from the poison. He tried some powder, herbs to cure her. He also pour some paraffin on her scorpion beaten toe and burnt it to reduce the poison. He was trying everything which are suggested by the villagers. The whole mohan holi man was also present there who was performing his religious rituals to reduce the poison.

After twenty hours the poison started reducing its activities. Slowly mother started curing. She thanked the god as the scorpion chosen her not her children. This shows the Indian mother's affection towards their children. She was not thinking about herself but of her children.

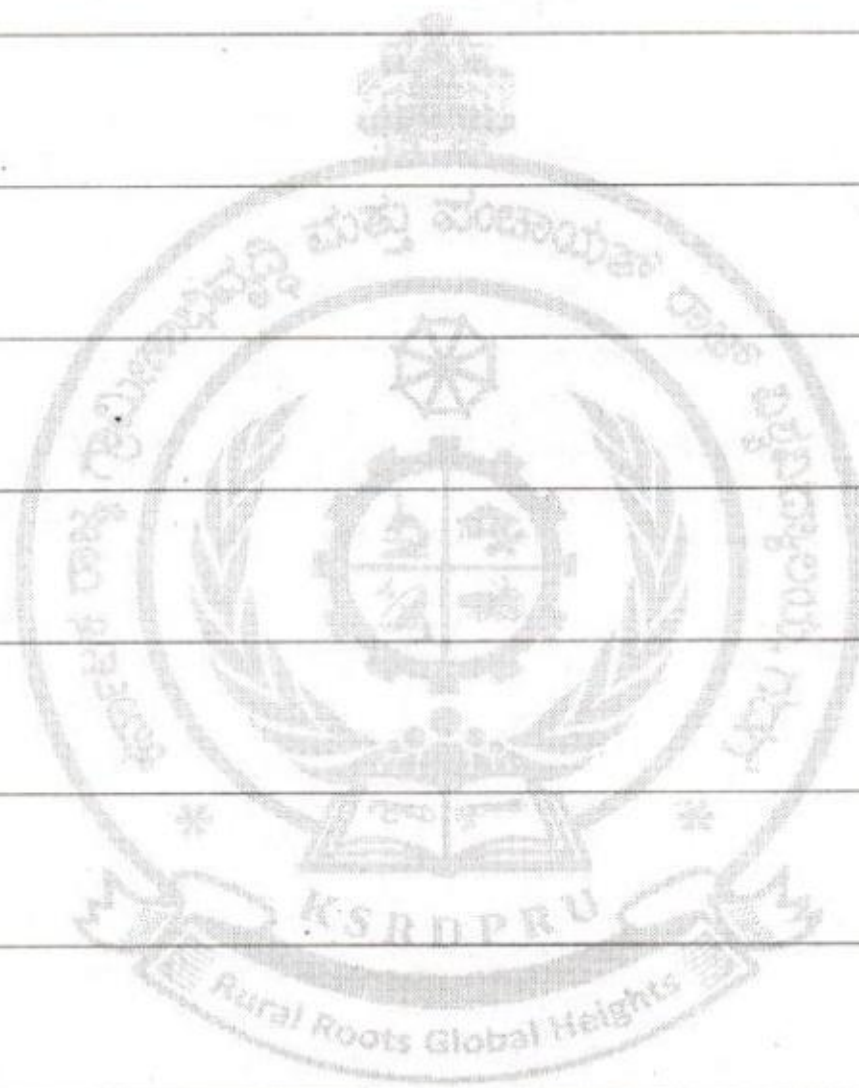

In this poem we can see the people believing in superstitions and not practically thinking minds. Only some people wanted to understand the situation and solution for it, like narrator's father. Only buzzing god's name will not ~~are~~ solve the problem the efforts to solve the problem is needed.
